

How is a fossil made?

An animal dies in mud/sand

Layers of Sedimentary rock build up on top of the animal and all the soft parts decay.

Minerals replace the bone which forms a fossil.

The fossil rises to the surface and the rock is worn away by erosion.

Palaeontologists discover the fossil and use the evidence to find out more about the past.

